AN INDIGNANT TEACHER.

She Complains of the Condition of the Streets Near the Hickory School.

"The attendance at the Hickory School is being very seriously interfered with on necount of the general absence of street crossings and sidewalks in that vicinity," and Secretary Piper of the board of education yesterday. "It is almost utterly impossible for the teachers and scholars to reach the building at all owing to the deep cuts and deep clay mud which provails for several blocks around."

"Yea," added one of the ladies who teach at Hickory, "It is simply a shame and a dispersace that the city authorities do not provide us with some crossings and walks. The decreast is the Reyal gorgo-shout stay feet det, but the Reyal gorgo-shout stay feet det, must be climbed around by us every day at an angle of forty-live degrees, and you can imprine how much life a nerson has left after performing such a terrible feat. We teachers and the children, too, have became not only out and out disgusted but thoroughly heart-sick over the matter. How we would like to get the street commissioner, or whoever he is, by the hair—ny, but we would make him dance!" COOK AND HIS WIFE.

COOK AND HIS WIFE.

Their Married Life Said to Have been One of the Utmost Misecy.

Mrs. Cook was seen again yesterday and requested to explain how, for more than a week, she had failed to recognize her bushand and then suddenly come to the conclusion that the remains, so often referred to, were these of her lord.

There was apparent candor in her reply, and her story seemed to hang together so well as to leave little doubt that it was the recital of her miserable life with the deceased. A great deal of the tale has already appeared in This Has, but several features were discovered which have not yet been made public. These were substantiated by Mrs. Houston, with whorf Alrs. Cook is now, and has for some time been living.

Cook for several years had exhibited evidences of insanity. Frequently his face above the mouth lost its color and became suffored with a pale green tinge which would ascend to the temples. With his face thus colored Cook's eyes would stare into vacancy, he would clench his flats, raise his arms above his head and fairly growl with madness. Indeed he would become a madnen in the fullest sense of the term. When under the domination of this power he would destry almost anything which happened to se in his way. He is known to have four his wife's clothes into wheels up the received and control results and to have estatered them to the winds. Some daughter. To this property Cook secured one deed, which he failed to record, thus necessitating the securing of another by his wife. At the time of his marriage, Cook was keeping a general store outside Toronto.

Mrs. Cook has no money, being compelled to telegraph her father for fands with which to bury her husband. This was the first formation on the subject farnished her parent by the widow.

Two "clock yesterday afternoon found Mrs. Cook attired in deep montaing, her two intic children clinging to her sairs and her babo in her aron, at the undertaking rooms to attend the funeral. No tears moistened her eyes, no sorrow shook her frame. Neither of the children were old enough to appreciate the surroundings.

Hateful Blood Relations.

Hateful sindred are those sprusy from the parent stem—malaria. They are cuills and fiver, biloids remittent fever, dumb ague and ague cake. These fors to bodily peace are all biloid relations, as there is no doubt that these endeme complaints are produced by contamination of the blood by the mlasmatus existent in both air and water in malarious regions. Hostotier's Stonach Bitters expels from the blood the virus with which missma infects, but it does more than this, it neutrations the atmospheric and aqueous poison and its germs before they have permanently fructified in the system, and thus effectually protects against it the fierce inroads of this diabolic brotherhood of diseases. Thus it is not only a remedy but a preventive, premet the relieving, lasting in effect and perfectly efficient. Nervousness, binousness, dyspepsia and kidney trouble also succumb to it.
